To the PUBLIC

THE felf-evident utility of every compilation of this nature, renders a ceremonious introduction or prolix Defination totally unnecessary

I gratefully acknowledge and return my fincere thanks to the Public and my particular mercantile Fuends, who have rendered me every affiftance in their power, for regular information; and, with unwearied attention. I flatter myfelf the prefent work will be found on a more liberal scale than any extant, having many Thousand Names more.

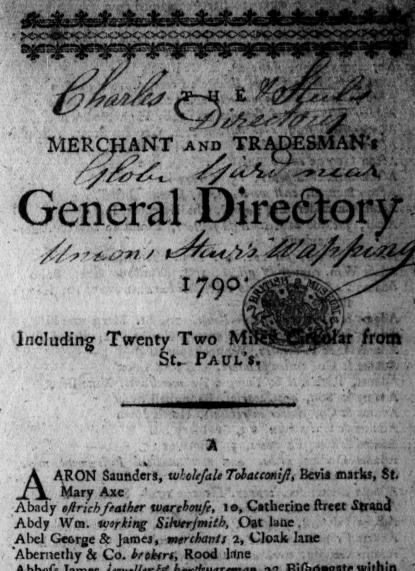

My experience in this line, has been the happy inflrument of my having had the honour of an introduction to houses of the first consequence. Hearing their objections to the confined plan of others, prompted me to be particularly assiduous to do every thing of that kind away, and to merit the public and their approbation.

The general approbation bestowed on my former plan of ten miles from the extremities of London, and the accuracy and correctness with which it has been hitherto distinguished, has secured it a decided preference, and amply rewarded me for the unremitting attention dedicated to it, and as it will ever be my chief study to merit the patronage so liberly conferred upon me, I have extended my former plan of ten miles from the exeremities to Twenty-two circular miles from St. Pauls.

It is natural to suppose, from a Work of this difficult and extensive nature, that omissions may have taken place, though taken with the greatest care, namely, by servants not having it in their power to give a firm; every new firm will be gratefully acknowledged, and properly inserted by being sent to the Editor, Roger Wakefield, No. 21, St. John street, Clerkenwell.

This Directory will beannually re-published, with such alterations, additions, and improvements, as the vicificules of time will make necessary to support its correctness; and the general complaint of not coming out early, entirely removed.
